There are a number of different kinds of dune system, and specific features of dune systems that can be identified. On the coast a lot of sand. There are different stages in the process that forms dunes. Each stage in this process is shown on the following slides. suggested for this. First, coastal dunes are relatively complex phenomena that form has been given to aeolian processes on tropical and polar coasts. Thirdly. Coastal dunes, often referred to as sand dunes, form where there is a readily available supply of sand-sized sediment and are located landward of the beach. In physical geography, a dune is a hill of loose sand built by aeolian processes (wind) or the flow of water. Dunes occur in different shapes and sizes, formed by interaction with the sea. Some coastal areas have one or more sets of dunes running parallel to the shoreline directly inland from the beach. In most cases, the dunes. Coastal dune recovery is a slow process, generally following the recovery of the beach. It is necessary for dunes to form and recover following a category 3 hurricane. Coastal dunes are ubiquitous elements of the dune-beach system that exist along the shores. processes, on the dune form itself, and of regional dune systems.
